I was kidnapped and taken to Indio for The Coachella Valley Music and Arts Festival... no chance of writing regular reviews this week, I've been slammed with the best concert series in existence. My ears are still ringing, a full review shall follow.

For the moment, rest assured that I have a whole new appreciation of music, which was the intent of my escort. I went for the Red Hot Chili Peppers, I left with a love of Busdriver, Peaches, and the mighty VNV Nation, among many others. Next time your SO invites you to a summit of the newest of new music, don't even hesitate: this was the show of a lifetime, something I never imagined and doubt I'll ever see again.

If any of you were there, please email me with your impressions! I'm dying to know how I missed this thing in the past. Spare me the newbie comments, though, I admit I was reluctant at first but I went.... so there!

Stay tuned...
